

EMERGENCY EXPENSE COVERAGE

Your RV is your home away from home. It's where you sleep, cook meals and relax while on the road. But what if a mishap kept you from staying in your RV while on a trip? Who would pick up the tab for temporary housing or travel home? How about the cost to transport your damaged RV back home, if necessary?

EMERGENCY EXPENSE COVERAGE. Many RVers insure their motor home or travel trailer on their auto policy. That can be a mistake if you're ever forced to stay in a hotel while your RV gets repaired, or need to travel home because of damage to your RV. Typical auto policies will not provide coverage for emergency expenses like these.

Fortunately, a Foremost RV policy pays for temporary housing or travel expenses to get you home if you're more than 50 miles from home. We'll even pay to transport your damaged RV to your home or a storage facility.

While on a vacation, you get into an accident with a truck. Nobody is injured, but the back end of your motor home is seriously damaged. It will take 7-9 days to repair. You decide to return home. The cost for a one-night hotel stay and flight home the next day is $450.

FOREMOST SETTLEMENT
$450.00

Accidents are traumatic enough without having to worry about who's going to pay for emergency expenses. Foremost RV policies cover up to $500 for emergency expenses like these. Full-time RVer? Foremost's Full-Timer package provides a full $2,000 of coverage.

TYPICAL AUTO POLICY SETTLEMENT***

Because most people have a home to live in when their car is being repaired, it's no surprise that auto policies don't provide coverage for hotel stays while your RV is being repaired. That's because auto policies treat an RV like any other automobile. Don't count on getting reimbursed for your expenses to get back home either.
